Priests And Ministers Study At Hebrew Union

The fellowship system at the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion was hailed as contributing "significantly" to interfaith understanding in America. Six ministers are studying this year — the seventy-fifth since the college was founded — for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. The system was established four years ago following a period of about fifteen years during which Protestant and Roman Catholic clergymen had taken occasional courses.

The chief courses studied by Catholic priests are Hebrew and Semitic languages. Ministers study Hebrew, the Bible, rabbinics and theology.

"These fellowships are making a significant and practical contribution to interfaith amity in America," Dr. Nelson Glueck, the Institution's president, said. "At a time when men need desperately to know and to understand one another, in this hour of attack upon the spiritual basis in which our common democracy is rooted, these fellowships provide a means by which Christian ministers come to study and to work together with the liberal Jewish ministers of tomorrow.

"This year six brilliant, young, graduate Christian ministers are studying for their doctors degrees at the college. When these ministers have completed their studies at the college and have gone out into their practical ministry or into the academic world of their own divinity schools, our hope is that they will teach the Christians of America that which the rabbinical students must teach the Jews of America and what we must all teach one another — namely, that the human heart is big enough to embrace all men and that the divine spirit is within all of us.

"One of the great values in having these young ministers at H. U. C. is that they get a deeper understanding of Christianity by studying the sources of Judaism as taught at our liberal Jewish seminary."

Four fellowships were made available this year by Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Horowitz, of New York, through the Louis J. and Mary E. Horowitz Foundation. Mr. Horowitz is a widely known philanthropist, engineer and industrialist.

The four Horowitz fellows are: The Rev. Emmitt R. Harrell of Brookville, Ky., from the Cincinnati Bible Seminary; Dr. Aaron Lee Hocutt, of Boston, from Crozer Seminary, Chester, Pa.; Dr. Willis Allen Shotwell, of Louisville, from Southern Baptist, Louisville; and Dr. William S. Sparks, of Indianapolis, from Butler University.

Dr. Ronald M. Hals, of Middletown, Ohio, who was graduated from Capital University at Columbus, is studying under an American Jewish Committee interfaith fellowship.

The sixth fellow is Dr. Charles W. Baughman of Chidester, Ark., from Southern Methodist University. He is studying under the Dr. David Lefkowitz Interfaith Fellowship, established in 1949 in honor

Business Begun in Pushcarts Is 50 Years Old

Fifty years ago five young immigrants on the Lower East Side of New York decided to pool their resources and combine their newspaper delivery routes into one enterprise. Starting with a capital of $2,000 plus one horse and wagon, they went into business under the then-pretentious title of Metropolitan News Company.

They rented a basement at 172 Henry Street for $15 a month. There they bundled copies of the four Yiddish dailies they handled, kept books and at night carefully locked away the pushcarts used for most of their deliveries — the wagon was for their uptown trade. At the end of their first year, they had grossed $150,000.

Today, at the half-century mark, the company operates 105 trucks, delivering 500,000 newspapers to 4,000 newsstands in the city. As one of the world's largest deliverers of newspapers, it has an annual gross income of $9,000,000.

The story was told to the New York Times by Louis Weinstock, one of the four surviving members of the original company. Mr. Weinstock recalled that he was 18 years old at the time and was the second youngest member of the enterprise. The others were Myer Rosen, Joe Kalmanoff, Charles Hertzig, and the late Morris Eisenman.

Mr. Weinstock, who started delivering papers when he was 12, said that his route was three miles long, winding in and out of East Side streets. He covered the area with a broken-down baby carriage on which he had mounted a wooden shoe crate. All deliveries were on a C.O.D. basis and he netted around $17 a week. The others covered similar routes in different sections of the area. They bought their papers at the consumer price.

Mr. Weinstock recalled that a youngster named Dave Sarnoff won their favor, and the delivery company members supplied him with newspapers at the price they bought them. The boy then sold the papers to newsboys at a ten per cent profit. Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff is now chairman of the board of Radio Corporation of America.

"There were others, too," Mr. Weinstock said, "men who became prominent in law and other fields, but I don't remember their names now."

One of their first purchases, Mr. Weinstock said, was a pushcart with wire wheels. A Brooklynite named John Koerner made it for $20. They ordered more, tremendously pleased with its trim lines. Later, when Metropolitan advanced to full horse and wagon delivery, Mr. Koerner was commissioned to build their wagons.

John Koerner Sons, Inc., of 94 Walton Street, Brooklyn, now constructs truck bodies for the news delivery company, and Mr. Weinstock says business with that concern runs into "many thousands of dollars a year."

Early in its career the company used its increasing influence in the

Great New York Builder Leaves Sons In Charge

Sam Minskoff, sixty-six, founder and president of Sam Minskoff & Sons, one of New York's largest builders, died at his home in the Hotel Navarro, 112 Central Park South. In his forty-two years as a builder, Mr. Minskoff erected buildings valued at more than $100,000,000. These included some of the finest apartment houses in the city. He was also the president of Trans Bore Management Corporation, a real estate firm that managed many of the buildings he built.

His company is represented by buildings of all types — theatres, stores, hospitals, office buildings and hotels — not only in New York City, but also in Westchester County, Long Island and in Syracuse, Baltimore, and Washington. Mr. Minskoff was one of the first to develop Queens Boulevard, the Grand Concourse, Manhattan's East Side and Central Park South. He built fine apartment houses and smart hotels, such as the Navarro, in which he lived, says the New York Herald Tribune. His best-known buildings include 480 Park Avenue, 710 Park Avenue, 737 Park Avenue, 1 East Sixty-sixth Street, and the Bronx Hospital.

Mr. Minskoff was born in Russia and his first job in the United States was as a plumber. It was his own plumbing company. In 1908, he moved into the building field with the construction of an apartment house in the East Bronx. Soon afterward he was one of the biggest builders in New York. As early as 1924 Mr. Minskoff was building two seventeen-story apartment houses in the Bronx worth a total of $4,500,000 — the Edna Court and Chester Court houses on Amsterdam Avenue.

Orchestra Of 94 To Start U.S. Tour

The ninety-four-member Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, including eminent musicians who established their careers in twenty countries before becoming Israelis, arrived in New York, on January 1 for a three-month tour of the United States and Canada during which it will give fifty-five concerts in forty cities.

Edward A. Norman, president of the American Fund for Israel Institutions, which is sponsoring the tour, made public a partial itinerary, indicating that the tour will start on Monday night, January 8, at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria. On Sunday, January 7, before the formal opening of the tour, the orchestra will give a special concert in Washington.

Mr. Norman emphasized that bringing the orchestra to the United States was the most ambitious cultural effort ever undertaken in the U. S. in connection with Israel. The orchestra, he said, is Israel's "proudest possession" and sending it here is one way which Israel can say "thank you" to the United States for help America has given to Israel.

The orchestra is under the musical direction of Serge Koussevitzky and Leonard Bernstein. At the concert on January 6, Mr. Bernstein will conduct a program including his "Jeremiah" Symphony. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Jan Peerce, tenor, and Isaac Stern, violinist, will be the soloists.

The orchestra was founded by the late Bronislaw Huberman, noted violinist, in 1936. One of its original aims was to give employment to talented Jewish musicians who had lost their positions in Germany on account of the Nazi regime's racial policies. Arturo Toscanini conducted the first concert that December; it has since been led by many prominent European and American conductors.

In addition to guests from abroad, it is led by two conductors living in Israel, Michael Taube and George Singer. Forty of its original seventy-two members are still in its ranks. Ten of its present ninety-four members were born in Israel; six of the musicians are women.

The oldest member of the orchestra is Leon Szulc, 70, who settled in Israel in 1936 after living most of his life in his native Warsaw. The youngest is 19-year-old Peter Simenauer who fled with his parents from Berlin in Hitler's regime and settled in Tientsin,

Israel To Continue To Receive Influx

Contrary to so many "expert" predictions, the Israel Government will maintain its policy of unrestricted immigration although it is the primary cause of the country's critical economic condition.

The crux of the economic difficulties lies in the fact that the rate of immigration since the state was founded has far outstripped industrial development to absorb new people. Each new shipload of Jews reaching the country makes the position worse and by the Government's own admission, the point has been reached where "prospects for the success or failure (of Israel) are balanced on the scales."

By all normal economic considerations a regulated rate of immigration should be put into effect immediately. Exports for 1950 will cover only about 15 per cent of the imports and although gifts, mainly from United States Jewry, and releases of blocked sterling have helped immensely, the country still is going far deeper into debt than anyone wanted or expected.

Despite this gloomy picture none of the political parties wants to change the immigration policy, reports the New York Times. They appear to be moved as much by moral principles as political considerations. It would be painting the parties too pure to say that the idea has never arisen, but it has got no further than that.

More than 500,000 new immigrants have been taken into the state since May, 1948, and they are continuing to come at the rate of nearly 200,000 a year. If sufficient financial backing is received, the Government hopes to maintain this rate for the next three years making Israel a nation of about 2,000,000. By then all Jews who want to leave North Africa, the Arab States and Eastern Europe will have been brought to Israel, and a rational immigration policy will be possible.

The changing nature of immigration in the last few months has increased the problem of fitting new people into the economic fabric of the state. In the year and a half after the state was founded, movement was mainly from Europe and immigrants brought with them skills and professions needed in the country. Many also had possessions and were not a complete charge on the Government.

In the first eight months of 1950 more than 100,000 Jews from Africa and Asia were brought to Israel, compared with 60,000 from Europe — an almost complete reversal of the ratio in the preceding eighteen months. The source of the African and Asian movement was mainly Yemen, Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, and Libya and immigrants as a whole were unskilled and illiterate, possessing only the clothes on their backs.

This has resulted in a substantial lengthening of the period between the arrival of the immigrants and the completion of training to fit them into the country's economy. To discover means of shortening this period has become one of the Government's most pressing tasks. The Government has been pleasantly surprised in some instances by the adaptability of Yemenites and others from the Arab countries, but on the whole the process of turning their primitive capabilities to modern industrial needs has been slow and laborious.

One of the complicating factors of the immigration problem has been recent pressure from the Iraqi Government to speed up the movement of Jews from that land. Iraqi Jewry had been one of the most wealthy communities in the world but, like Governments of Eastern Europe, Iraq is allowing them to take little of their possessions and fortunes to Israel. About 4,000 are being brought from Iraq monthly and at this rate it will take two years to remove them all. The other large stream of immigration at the moment flows from Rumania, which finally granted permission for Jews to leave after more than a year of negotiations.

Just about all hope has been abandoned that the Soviet Union will ever change its policy and allow Soviet Jews to go to Israel, says the New York Times, adding that it is estimated that between 80 and 90 per cent of 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 Jews in the Soviet Union would depart for Israel if they had the chance. Altogether 4,800 have reached Israel from the Soviet Union since the founding of the state, many having made their way illegally from their home country to Poland.

The life of the new immigrant is

Huge U.S. Credit To Israel Will Expand Agriculture

The Export-Import Bank announced in Washington a $35,000,000 credit to Israel to help finance a two-year expansion program for that country's agriculture and the production of new fertilizer plants. Israel will provide $70,000,000 to supplement the loan.

The Israeli Embassy announced plans for offering a bond issue to the American public as part of Israel's long-term program for attracting foreign capital. Officials said the plans are unprecedented for a foreign government and that for that reason they did not know how much money might be raised. They indicated, however, that some "hoped" a target of $500,000,000 might be attained. There was no indication when the issue might be offered.

Conclusion of the credit negotiations came as most of a $100,000,000 Export-Import Bank credit granted Israel in January, 1949, was either spent or committed in a development program covering agriculture, industry, transportation and communications and housing and other community facilities.

Dr. Abba Eban, Israeli Ambassador to the United States, issued a statement thanking the bank for its "sympathetic attention and thoughtfulness" in examining Israel's requirements and plans. He added: "Approval of the credit testifies both to the highly cordial nature of United States-Israel relations and to the confidence felt by the highest financial quarters in the productive potentiality of Israel's economy."

At the press conference at the Israeli Embassy, Dr. Oscar Gass, economic adviser to the Israel government, said the new $35,000,000 credit would be used to buy American equipment and materials necessary to double the country's 1949 agricultural output by 1953, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

Israel also plans to build new region irrigation works to add 70,000 acres to the irrigated area of the country and to establish new fertilizer plants for the country's needs and to provide some for export. New citrus planting and general rehabilitation of the country's citrus industry also is scheduled in a program designed to enable Israel to double its 1949 fresh citrus fruit exports by 1953 despite the rising domestic consumption.

Dr. Gass said the new expansion program should earn, or save, nearly $35,000,000 in foreign exchange for Israel. He also reviewed the earlier $100,000,000 credit. In agriculture, he said, $35,000,000 of the credit was for development or expansion of about 20,000 farms. More than $70,000,000 was provided by Israel for this program so that the country's food output increased by approximately 50 per cent in the 1949-1950 period.

In industry, $20,000,000 of the

BUSINESS BEGUN

Jewish newspaper field to induce publishers to carry a column in English and encourage immigrants to learn the language. It wasn't long before publishers of English-language newspapers began to realize that a new field was opening up among a large population of recent immigrants.

At present the Metropolitan delivery list includes twenty English, four Yiddish and seventeen foreign language publications, most of them dailies, with a few weeklies and monthlies. The company operates from three buildings, but has acquired a large plot at Rutgers Slip and South Street where it intends to construct a three-story building with facilities for offices, garages and delivery.

Two sons of the founders, Harold J. Weinstock and Abraham N. Rosen, are now associated with the business. Mr. Weinstock said that because of the present national emergency and world crisis no celebration would be held. Instead, the company will distribute $12,000 among twenty-five charity groups representing all religions.

HUGE U.S. CREDIT

credit and more than $80,000,000 of Israeli funds was lent to 300 firms. These ranged from $2,500,000 lent to the Palestine Electric Corporation to a few hundred dollars to individual artisans to buy single items of American equipment.

In the field of transportation and communications, $5,500,000 was allocated for port development, $5,000,000 for extension of the telephone and telegraph system, $3,500,000 for air, ship and rail transportation, and $6,000,000 for trucks, buses and related equipment. Under supplementary credits from American suppliers, Israel has bought 5,000 vehicles.

In housing and community facilities, $25,000,000 of the credit was added to nearly $250,000,000 of Israeli funds for the 1950-1951 program. Dr. Gass pointed out that the relatively small proportion of credit money provides the American construction machinery and building materials without which the whole program would collapse.

The New York Herald Tribune says that the total net investment in Israeli's economic program in 1940-1950, according to Dr. Gass, amounted to approximately $500,000,000.

a hard one. His home is likely to be a rudimentary hut or tent camp for some time and it is only recently that the Government instituted a public works policy instead of allowing immigrants to lead an idle life in the camps. Economically the new program is an expense the country can ill afford, but it has halted the demoralization that camp idleness was inducing.

It is a matter of pride to the Government and the Israeli people as a whole that despite the hardships only 3,858 immigrants, less than 3 per cent of the total brought to Israel have sought permits to leave.

who knows what he likes!

Quite a judge of food is this young gourmet! His fond grandmother might be tempted to call him a "mayvin." Cater to his tastes and he gets down to his job with gusto, though often without ceremony.

We, at the House of Heinz, take quite seriously the likes and dislikes of this connoisseur. We have provided him with a whole line of Strained Foods, so tasty and tempting to his young appetite as to merit an enthusiastic wave of his spoon.

Of course, flavour is only part of our job in preparing Heinz Baby Foods. Retaining the all-important vitamins and minerals, needed for the baby's development, is our principal concern and always will be.

We have built the Heinz Kitchens "alongside" the fields where specially selected fruits and vegetables grow. From the harvest to the kettles is a matter of only a few hours. In the Heinz process, exposure to air is avoided, for air is a veritable vitamin robber. The vegetable juices, far too valuable to lose, are retained in the straining. Everything must be saved for Baby!

Heinz Baby Foods are the happy combination of the science and the art of cookery. The makers of the 57 Varieties are at the service of His Majesty—The Baby!

HEINZ BABY FOODS

MADE WITHOUT MEAT OR FAT!

Many Heinz Strained Foods and Heinz Junior Foods for older babies are prepared without the use of meat, meat stock or fat or any other ingredient, forbidden by the Jewish Dietary Laws.

The End Of The Yemen Exile

BY DR. J. VAINSTEIN

"The long exile of Yemen Jewry is in the process of liquidation", this is the headline which spread like wildfire through the Yishuv and the whole world, a secret which many in Israel knew already. In the history of the ingathering of the exiles, the immigration of the Yemenite Jews is most wonderful and exhilarating of all. The Yemenite exile which, according to tradition dates back to the destruction of the Temple by Nebukhadnezzar, has perhaps suffered more than any other at the hands of its wild and brutal rulers. This Jewry with all its tribes, which had originally brought to Yemen human culture and the belief in one God, was very quickly subjugated by the Yemen rulers and reduced to the grade of second rate citizens.

According to the "Covenant of the Prophet", Jews were prohibited from riding on a donkey or horse, were not allowed to build a house higher than that of their Moslem neighbours, were obliged to walk at the left side of a Moslem in the street, and before a court were allowed to plead only through a Moslem. What wonder then that since days of old this Jewry has tried by all ways and means to leave that cursed and subjugated soil! Every false prophet found adherents among them, for those unsuspecting Jews believed everyone who had a message of redemption in his mouth.

When I asked these Jews in the Aden camp why they were in such a hurry this time and broke through all the hindrances on the way to the Holy Land, leaving all their property and possessions behind, there was just one answer in their mouths: "In the days of Ezra, the scribe, when this messianic leader called upon us to return to Israel, we missed that great hour and opportunity to return to Zion, and because of that the Almighty punished us with a long, bitter and cursed Exile. Now, however, that we have heard of the resurrection of the Jewish State and the Messiah David Ben Gurion has come — now we shall no longer repeat that great mistake for which we have paid with so many sacrifices and so much suffering."

In order to facilitate the Aliyah of the Yemenite Jews, three steps were necessary.

(a) To persuade the British authorities at Aden to permit the opening of a reception camp for the refugees and to allow them to be flown to Israel from the Aden airport, which is actually a R.A.F. base.

(b) To obtain the permission of the Sultans who rule in the British Protectorate to allow the transit of these Jews.

(c) The consent of the King of Yemen to allow the mass exodus.

It was therefore, no easy task. However, after some negotiations I succeeded in persuading the Governor and his assistants that they would be doing an historic and humanitarian act if they would help us to carry out this very great human undertaking. It was certainly one of the greatest aerial evacuation operations ever carried out by any government.

In my heart of hearts I had always felt that as soon as I could obtain the consent of the British authorities the other difficulties and stumbling blocks would also be removed, even though the authorities had claimed that it was the Arab Sultans who were opposing the move. I must state here, in praise of the Aden authorities, that from the moment they gave their consent they showed every possible helpfulness and goodwill in order to bring this great chapter to a successful conclusion. In this spirit they had arranged, according to my request, a meeting with the Sultans of Audely, Fadeley and the Sheriff of Beihan, through which countries the Jews of the Yemen would have to pass. The negotiations with the Sultans were short and sweet and they showed much understanding for the cause we had discussed. Naturally, encouragement on our part was not lacking...

An interesting episode is worth recalling here. Talking to the Sheriff of Beihan — who is, incidentally, an Arab of patriarchal appearance — he asked me to give him a few hundred Jews, explaining that in his land there were no Jewish subjects and that he needed them in order to fulfil the commandment in the Koran to be the "Protector of the Jews". When I replied that it is an important commandment and a religious duty for a Jew to settle in Israel, he asked me to give him at least some invalids and aged people — and there were many who had come from the Yemen — in order that he might fulfil this commandment of the Koran. The British political Agent of the area told me that the request of this Arab is most sincere and that the Sheriff had already put this request to him a number of times.

When the consent of the Imam for the departure of the Yemenite Jews was obtained and they began to receive those notes written by him, "La Man'a Aleikum", meaning, "I do not prevent you from going", it was pretty clear to us that we would not be able to organize this Aliyah and plan the exit from Yemen in stages and according to localities. At the outset we believed that the numbers would not exceed a few hundred per day so that a camp of medium size and a daily airlift would give us an Aliyah of one thousand per week. Indeed, the authorities made it a condition, for various reasons, that the camp hold no more than one thousand people at a time.

During the first week or two the numbers were small, but very quickly the flow increased until it became a veritable stream which brought almost 800 people daily. Six planes were put into the service of this operation "Flying Carpet", and each of them was able to take 130 people (including children).

In the far north, native families often travel a great many miles by dogteam to take advantage of such services as immunization for their children. In most cities and towns the distance to the nearest clinic is only a few blocks. Why not take that trip today, to protect your child against dangerous killer diseases?

Washing hands before eating or handling food and brushing teeth immediately after eating are two essential points in child training that adults would do well to follow. If the toothbrush is not handy after eating, rinsing the mouth with water will help.

The camp is situated approximately 72 kilometres from Aden town. This town, by the way, has no vegetation, no rain and even thorns and thistles are hardly seen. It is a town whose hills and soil are of copper compound, with a very hot and depressing climate. Owing to the tremendous and sudden flow, only a part of the fourteen thousand refugees could be housed in huts, huts ments or tents, while the majority had to lie about without a roof over their heads. It was a most difficult situation, but the Yemenites showed, notwithstanding their hardships, great happiness and patience

The very great economic suffering of the Yemenite Jews and the hunger and starvation which had beset them for so many years undermined their bodily resistance to the many diseases that were rampant in the Yemen. I can still see before me the depressing sight of thousands of human beings, broken and dispirited from long suffering, from wandering through hills and desert in dreadful, inhuman conditions, from pangs of hunger—and yet, their faces beamed a Godly and princely spirit, nobility and sanctity.

These people arrived at the Yemenite border, penniless and naked, since on the long and weary journey they are mostly robbed of their money and possessions by bands of robbers and brigands. The only property from which they would not be parted are the Sifrei Torah. From the borders of the Protectorate, the Yemenites are brought to the camp in cars belonging to Aden Arabs.

When they arrive at the camp they are at once stripped of their clothes which are burnt immediately in case they are carriers of disease. Then the people are washed and sprayed with D.D.T. as a preventive measure against the spreading of infection. After that they receive new clothes and are placed in the various huts or tents, according to families.

Owing to the low state of health among the refugees, a clinic and hospital with 300 beds was established. It is interesting that originally no person would attend these of his own accord. Often it was necessary to seek out the ill and bring them to hospital by force. It has also happened that the sick who were brought to the hospital in a dying condition ran away from it as soon as the medicine had reduced their temperature, because they interpreted this fact as recuperation.

Relatives used to steal members of their family out of the hospital because they were afraid they would remain behind. Special guards had to be placed at the hospitals to prevent anyone from escaping. To the clinic, too, they had often to be taken by force, but when they discovered that the medicine or ointment was healing them, they literally kissed the feet of the doctor as an expression of their thanks and appreciation.

The Yemenites have brought with them many Sifrei Torah and holy books. I have seen in the storehouse of the Jewish Agency almost 300 Holy Scrolls and thousands of books such as Bibles, prayerbooks, Talmud, Midrash, etc. The Sifrei Torah and books will receive special care. They have been packed in cases and will be taken to Israel at the first opportunity. As far as possible the names of the owners have been marked, but there was also much public property.

Nearby the camp a cemetery has been established where a few hundred unfortunate ones have found their eternal rest. They have not lived to see with their own eyes the Promised Land and have fallen victims to the rigours of the long and difficult journey.

The principle governing the Aliyah from the camp is "first in, first out." Some hours before their departure the people are collected stripped of their camp clothes, washed and then given new clothes, as well as injections. It is a special pleasure to see the excitement and astonishment of the Yemenites when they arrive at the airfield and see the "huge bird" which will take them in its "belly" to Israel. With joy and exhilaration they enter the plane which during nine hours will fly them, on eagles' wings, to the Holy Land — the hope of their lives.

The pilots told me that at first the planes contained the usual upholstered seats but the Yemenites refused to sit on them. During the journey they used to dis- appear under the seats and stretch themselves out on the floor. For this reason the soft seats were replaced by benches which seemed more comfortable to them and which incidentally, made room for more passengers on the plane.

four tablespoons sugar
two eggs
one cup sour cream
six teaspoons baking powder
one-eighth pound butter or other shortening three cups all-purpose flour

Cream butter, or shortening, and sugar, until fluffy, drop in eggs; add sour cream, and mix well. Sift in flour, with the baking powder. Knead dough until stiff enough to roll out. Roll out on floured board; and divide in four parts. Spread each part with the filling, which is made of one-half pound butter creamed with two cups brown sugar. Roll up each part as for jelly roll; and cut in one-half inch slices. Place cut-side down on greased baking sheet, and bake in a 400-degree oven for twenty minutes. Alternate filling can be made of thin apple slices, with raisins, cinnamon, and sugar; and dotted with butter, before rolling up.

Fifty men and women of Jewish faith in New Brunswick, N. J., filled jobs for their Christian neighbors who would ordinarily have had to work on Christmas Day. The job replacement program of the New Brunswick Post of Jewish War Veterans is part of its year-round effort to promote religious and racial harmony in this community. Most of the requests came from theatres and restaurants. Post members filled jobs of ushers, while the Hadassah and Junior Deborah provided cashiers and waitresses. About 200 men and women volunteered for the program, receiving no pay.

Older people often suffer from malnutrition. The causes may be economic conditions, dental troubles or ignorance of nutritional principles. There are certain rules for the selection and preparation of foods which will give the required amounts of nutritives necessary to the older body. Mr. Minskoff bought up some of the most famous properties in New York, reports the New York Herald Tribune. He bought the former home of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant at 5 East Sixty-fifth Street. Buying land from Yale University, he assembled two residential properties at Park Avenue and Seventy-first Street. After World War II, the Minskoff organization erected a rental apartment house on Park Avenue, new houses on Madison Avenue, the modern co-operative apartment house at 20 East Seventy-fourth Street, in which each suite has balconies and terraces.

At present the Minskoff organization is constructing an apartment house at Fifth Avenue and Seventy-third Street, an office building at Madison Avenue and Sixtieth Street, and, begun last week, the Minskoffs' first construction project in Brooklyn, a large retail store at Vanderbilt Avenue and Park Place.

Mr. Minskoff, whose company has offices at 521 Fifth Avenue, was assisted by his five sons. They will now carry on the business. He maintained an active interest in charities of all religious denominations. As part of this interest, he constructed the Bronx Hospital, the Concourse Center of Israel and the Beth Abraham Home for Incurables at cost. He served on the boards of these institutations as well as of Yeshiva University, Congregation Zichron Ephraim and the Bronx Fire Insurance Company. He was a Mason.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Esther Kerstein; his sons, Leo, Henry H., Jerome, Myron and Walter Minskoff; a daughter, Mrs. Muriel Conora; four brothers, Max, Saul, Paul and Nathan Minskoff; two sisters, Mrs. Celia Hurowitz and Mrs. Esther Handlin, and nine grandchildren.

THE END OF THE YEMENITE EXILE

It is amusing to see how during the whole time of the flight they stare through the windows with their mouths wide open in obvious astonishment. During the journey they receive as food dates, bread and water, while the children are given biscuits and sweetened tea. Every plane in which they travel has a Yemenite host who looks after the human cargo.

As we approach the end of this historic chapter we must record with gratitude the Jews of Aden, the majority of whom have by now already gone to Israel. For years they have done great work in redeeming virtual prisoners by rescuing many Yemenite Jews from Arab hands. Here is a case which I personally witnessed.

As I was sitting at a meeting with the heads of the community, a messenger arrived, who informed us that on the Yemenite-Protectorate border the Arabs were holding captive four Jewish girls out of a group of 12 Jews who had come from the Yemen. Eight of them were allowed to proceed while the girls were detained as sureties for £120 ransom money. One of the girls, aged 14, the messenger related, the Sultan wanted to buy himself for a wife.

The negotiations continued for some time and the members of the community paid the outrageous sum. The Arabs then brought the girls to the house of the chairman, Mr. Selim Benin. I shall certainly never forget the sight of the handing over of these pale, hungry and broken girls. Here I witnessed how souls and bodies are being saved and the people who did this have certainly acquired for themselves their World-to-Come.

Dr. Israel Goldstein, chairman of the Western Hemisphere Section of the World Jewish Congress, cabled John J. McCloy, High Commissioner in Germany, that it "deeply deplores" that the General Claims Law Bill, adopted by the City Parliament of Berlin, on October 30, 1950, "does not provide benefits in favor of the DP and falls short of the just demands of the victims of Nazi persecution in many other respects." Dr. Goldstein stated that "although the Bill ought to be permitted to become effective, the Allies should seek all appropriate means to correct its deficiency at the earliest possible moment." The cable to McCloy is a result of long negotiations on the General Claims Law Bill between the Jewish Restitution Successor Organization, the Joint Distribution Committee, and the Jewish Agency for Palestine, enumerating its deficiencies and seeking their correction. WJC considers the bill to be defective on three counts: It does not provide compensation in favor of DP inmates of Berlin camps; it sets very low maximum benefits for compensation because of property losses and similar damage; unlike the U. S. Zone Law, it does not provide for the rights of the JRSO.

The World Health Organization of the United Nations has invited Professor G. Mer, professor of epidemiology of the Hebrew University, and director of its Malaria Research Station in Rosh Pina, to serve as a member of the Expert Advisory Committee for Insecticides of the World Health Organization. On this committee only five members were appointed from all over the world. At the Rosh Pina Malaria Research Station, a department for insecticides has been established with the assistance of the World Health Organization. In the future this Centre will serve the whole Eastern Mediterranean region, which includes the following countries: Israel, the neighbouring Arab countries, Cyprus, Turkey, Persia, and Pakistan. Prof. Mer will be appointed to the Expert Committee for this region. The appointment is an honorary one for a period of five years, with the possibility of renewal at the completion of his term of office.

In The Steps Of Moses

"And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown up that he went out unto his brethren and looked on their burdens." (Exodus 2.11)

We read in the Torah of the birth and development of one of the greatest, not only of Israel, but of all mankind. Because of strange circumstances, Moses was brought up in the palace of King Pharaoh. In his youth, respect and honour were showered upon Moses. He might have remained within the palace walls, enjoying the luxuries and the mirth and the pleasure of royal Egyptian life. But very early, Moses was destined to reveal by his actions that he was to become the great leader. And so the Bible records, "Moses went out among his brethren, and looked upon their burdens." Because Moses was possessed of greatness, he dared to leave the palace and seek out his own people.

As he walked about, he saw an Egyptian smiting a Hebrew. No doubt others had seen this cruel act, but failed to notice it, or they had become hardened to this cruelty. Moses, possessed of loving kindness, and above all, a high sense of justice, took a stand in defence of the poor Hebrew slave. Still another act in defence of right reveals the greatness of Moses. He finds two Hebrews striving together. That must have broken his spirit. Here were two that should have stood united and instead were divided. He rightly protested against their behaviour because truth was his greatest yearning and aspiration. Because Moses dared to champion right and the cause of the downtrodden, he was forced to flee Egypt.

In Midian, a strange land, he again sought the opportunity to battle against injustice. He found that the daughters of the priests of Midian, as they came to water their father's flock, were dealt with unkindly by shepherds. Moses helped the daughters. For him morality knows no geographical boundaries. Although an alien in a strange land, he is willing to uphold the law of morality and seeks to establish justice.

Ahad Ha-Am, the great Jewish philosopher, rightly tries to categorize Moses. Was he a military hero? Far from it. The biblical record does not indicate that Moses played any part as a warrior. Moses surely cannot be characterized as a statesman. For, when he had to appear before Pharoah to plead the cause of the enslaved, he found himself weak in speech and in the art of diplomacy. He therefore requested that his brother, Aaron, come with him. In a sense, too, Moses is not considered as the law-giver. For every law-giver formulates laws for the time and place in which he lives. Not so with Moses. The laws which he gave were meant, for the most part, to be applied to the future when Israel would have entered their own land. What then is Moses? We agree with Ahad Ha-Am, who adheres to the great Jewish tradition that Moses was a prophet, and that "There has never arisen since in Israel, a prophet like unto Moses."

What are some of the characteristics of the prophet? Primarily, a prophet is a man of truth. In the pursuit of truth, the prophet knows of no compromises and of no excuses. He concentrates his mind and heart on ideal and idealism. Moses was the prototype of all the great prophets that came unto Israel. He was the saviour of his people, and because he was a prophet, he suffered, as do all those men and women who are possessed of the prophetic spirit. Often the heart of Moses was broken because his people least understood him. His people were not prepared to catch his vision and to appreciate his ideals. They murmured against him, but the prophet, despite his hardships, could not resist preaching his message of justice and righteousness.

Because of the prophetic ideal of Moses, Israel in turn became a prophetic people. For Moses gave unto Israel two of the greatest doctrines upon which hinges the salvation of humanity. The first of these is the proclamation, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is One." At a time when the world was spiritually in darkness and people worshipped idolatry and superstition, Moses dared to proclaim that God is the Universal Father. The corollary of this doctrine is the unity of mankind, hence the injunction, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Thirty-three centuries have passed since Moses, and the world is still struggling to make real the unity of God and the unity of mankind. The world has failed to realize universal freedom and universal justice. In the struggles of the United Nations to build an enduring peace, we see revealed the visions and the hopes of the greatest Jew of all times, Moshe Rabenu, Moses, our teacher and prophet. Because man lost kinship with God he lost kinship with his fellow-man.

It was Moses who gave unto Israel a mission to bear witness to God's unity. Our very survival and revival as a people were made possible by our witnessing as the servants of God.

How thrilling it is to behold Israel, reborn in Palestine, now engaged in writing a constitution, but much of that constitution is rooted in the prophetic tradition of Moses with its yearning for social justice and universal righteousness. We believe with the election in Israel and the adoption of the constitution in due course, Israel will mark a turning point not only in Jewish history but in human history. Indeed, the ancient Cabbalists were right when they believed that Moses was reincarnated in every age. Certainly, in our own day Moses lives again through the rebirth of "the kingdom of priests and the holy nation."

JEWISH VOCATIONAL SERVICE GUIDES, COUNSELS, AND PLACES THE YOUNG

BY ALFRED FEINTUCH, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, JEWISH VOCATIONAL SERVICE OF MONTREAL

When we consider the extent of a person's lifetime which he spends working, when we realize that the satisfaction or lack of satisfaction which a person finds on his job affects his entire outlook on life and when we think how a man's work affects his standard of living and that of his family, we might naturally assume that people select their occupational careers after careful planning. Similarly, we might assume that parents, who realize fully the importance of an adequate vocational adjustment for their children, encourage and help them to plan early for their careers.

How far this is from being true for a great proportion of our young people today can readily be seen during a visit to any of the employment services serving young people. Far too many young people are leaving our schools unprepared to face the very important task of choosing their life's work. Many have given little, if any, thought to the kinds of work they would like to do or are capable of doing. Few have any understanding of the kinds of jobs that are open to them and how they go about getting them. If they have already selected an occupational field, they rarely possess such essential information about their choices as the opportunities for getting into the field, the nature of the work, the special training and personal qualifications required, the opportunities for advancement, working conditions, wage scales and, what is important to us Jews, whether racial discrimination exists in the field and its effect upon the employment of Jews.

Many young people will insist upon jobs which pay relatively high beginning salaries despite the fact that these jobs may be "dead-end" ones without real futures for them. They often scoff at the apprenticeship opportunities which, while they may pay lower beginning salaries, hold far greater possibilities for them for the future. In addition, many young people find that they took the wrong courses in school in terms of their life's work.

As a result of their vague and confused method of choosing an occupation, it is not surprising that we find so many young people in jobs in which they are unhappy, dissatisfied and restless. It is no wonder that we find so much aimless shifting from job to job among them. In psychology today, we are keenly aware of the close relationship that exists between good vocational adjustment and good mental health. Being in the right field, doing work that one enjoys, increases one's satisfaction in living, the foundation of good health. In terms of our children, when we consider that they will be working at least 40 hours a week and that they probably will keep working for 40 or 50 years, the satisfaction or dissatisfaction they will feel in their work will influence greatly the kinds of persons they become.

From a materialistic point of view, being in the right field can mean thousands and thousands of dollars over the years. When a person is in the wrong field, one that is not in line with his interest and his abilities, his chances of success are greatly decreased and his earning power reduced accordingly. On the other hand, the individual who has selected an occupation in line with his interests and capabilities and one in which he obtains satisfaction, has a much better chance of advancement when competing for better paying jobs.

Selecting the right field generally requires careful and early planning. So important a matter should not be left to chance. To make a wise choice, a person should have sufficient information and knowledge in three general areas: He should have adequate information about the world of work and many different occupations. Since there are over 23,000 known occupations in Canada and the United States, he may need professional help to narrow his choices to the three or four occupations most suitable for him which he should study intensively. He must have a clear picture of his strong and weak points, his intellectual capacity, his interests, abilities, skills, health factors and personality structure. He must be able to match adequately what he learned about himself with the knowledge he has acquired about the world of work.

A most serious problem that I find with many young people today is that they do not understand or appreciate the importance of planning their careers early enough, while they still have time to make changes in their educational plans. They are not aware that early and proper vocational planning may save them from having to take training over again or from having to make fresh starts in different fields. The aimless drifting from course to course and from job to job adds up to wasted years, wasted dollars and much unhappiness.

Parents and schools have the prime responsibility in stimulating and encouraging young people to think early in terms of their vocational careers. The synagogues with their many activities for youth and the group work centers in the community likewise have important roles to play in this matter. The benefits that a community derives from having its young people make adequate vocational adjustments are too obvious to require elaboration.

As the professional guidance agency in Montreal, the Jewish Vocational Service is prepared to cooperate with parents and with all interested groups in the community to help young people plan their careers. Towards this end, in addition to its work with refugees and native born adults, the Jewish Vocational Service conducts a three-point youth program: A group guidance program in which trained counselors conduct discussions on career planning with the Jewish groups in the city. An individual counseling program in which professional counselors help young people with their educational and vocational guidance problems. In this work, our counselors have available the services of a psychologist administering the latest psychological and vocational tests and a vocational library with current information on most existing occupations. An employment program especially geared to meet the job counseling and placement needs of young people.

As a constituent agency of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, the Jewish Vocational Service provides these services without charge to any individual or Jewish organization in the community.

China, before making their way to Israel.

The two American members of the orchestra are Lynn Berman of Miami, Florida, who plays the trumpet, and Richard Wall, bassoonist, of New York. Both are members of the American Federation of Musicians, an A. F. L. affiliate, and became members of the orchestra when studying in Israel.

As they sipped coffee and munched their first American sandwiches the musicians heard Yosef Nivo, senior Israeli Consul in New York, express the hope that the tour "will foster friendship between the people of Israel and those of the North American continent."

The orchestra includes in its ranks five concert-masters, Rudolf Bergmann, Lorand Fenyves, Henry Heftel, Joseph Kaminsky, and David Gruenschlag. They were all first desk men in outstanding European orchestras, and they will take turns as concert-masters during the tour.

The scene at the airport was one of joyous and tearful reunion. The musicians were greeted by relatives and friends whom they had not seen in years. All had fled from their home countries under Nazi occupation and finally settled in Israel.
